Loser More Versatile.

They played each other's backhand frequently, and with good results. In whatever forward court play there was Miss Bayard figured alone, for the champion never left her position near the base line. All in all there was more versatility to Miss Bayard's game than that of her opponent, but with control lacking during the greater part of the tussie it availed her little.

After taking the opening set by a score of 6—2 Mrs. Falk quickly counted four straight games in the second. At that point Miss Bayard, with everything the second and part of the second and the second are straight games in the second. that point Miss Bayard, with everything to gain and nothing to lose, began speeding up perceptibly and attacking with greater abandon. With increesed confidence came better control and Miss Bayard drew up to 4—5. It was well for Mrs. Falk that she took the next game after it had gone to deuce twice, for her rival was coming fast, and in a third set, had it been necessary, might have turned the tables.

The surprise in doubles was not the defeat of Mrs. Louis G. Morris and Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs, but the decisive way in which it was accomplished. Their tennis all through the tournament had been very impressive, and they figured to have an even chance of triumphing over Miss Marie Wagner and Mrs. Bernard F. Stenz. The latter, however, led by a comfortable marsha from first to last and earned the title by a score of last and earned the title by a score of 6—2, 6—1.

Undoubtedly the greatest factor in the victory was the ability of Miss Wagner to end a raily with a decisive volley or overhead smash by coming up to the net at the right time. She anticipated strokes with excellent judgment. In deep court Mrs Stenz took care of the cross court driving in steady fashion, showing to advantage over Mrs Briggs in that respect. Mrs. Morris at the net blocked effectively at times, but the rival pair took gotfl care to keep the ball out of range. It was just as much skill as superior steadiness that decided the match.

smoothly and more confidently, Miss Bayard came through with a spirited rally that earned her four games out fo five, but at that stage Mrs. Falk was too far in the lead to be overhauled.

In contrast to her younger opponent, Mrs. Falk played boldly from the start, taking all sorts of chances in shaving the side lines and in driving the ball deep into alternate corners. She had more speed of stroke than in her earlier matches of the tournament, but it was in the matter of control, not speed, that she showed to advantage, for Miss Bayard drove every bit as hard and on service much harder.
